STAT

A16 Tuesday, August 2, 1988 ... RI

By Peter Maass Special to The Washington Post

border truce village for talks that would include Pyongyang's planned boycott of the Seoul Olympics.

North Korea, rebuffed in its bid proposed today that 15 lawmakers from each side meet next week at a pursuing a new round of diplomatic maneuvering with North Korea, SEOUL, Aug. 1-South Korea, communist North called for open Sept. 17. But in a letter to the Seoul government last week, the stay away from the Olympics, which to cohost the Games, has said it will talks on its involvement in the erase what Seoul considers to be the major security threat to the Games and could help lead to a rapprochement between Seoul and Pyongyang, technically still at war since the Korean War ended in an unsteady truce in 1953. North Korean participation would

#

The talks proposed today—a pre-lude to a meeting of all members of the two nations' parliaments— would be the first direct Northwas ended by Pyongyang in 1986. South contacts since the last round ğ week on a day chosen by North Kotruce village of Panmunjom side getting together at the border

North, while opening the door to more discussions on the Games, which is unacceptable to Seoul and also restated its cohosting demand, the diplomats and experts said. Furthermore, experts said, the the International Olympic Commit-tee.

litical experts in Seoul said they are pessimistic the talks will take place and believe the chances for success are remote even if they are held. South Korean President Roh Tae Woo announced last month a major shift toward conciliation with North of a similar change in Pyongyang, Korea. But there is little evidence

South Korea Proposes New Meeting With North

Following Roh's address July 7 outlining Seoul's new policy, the South Korean National Assembly speaker, Kim Chae Sun, in a letter to the North called for exchanges between lawmakers on either side of the Demilitarized Zone.

Kim sent back a letter today saying a preparatory meeting should be held, with 15 lawmakers from each last week's letter that all lawmakers from both sides should meet. North Korea responded, saying in THE WASHINGTON POST

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2011/08/12: CIA-RDP05T02051R000200350085-8